1 PURPOSE

1.1 The purpose of this document is to inform health and social care staff working in Rochdale Borough about the operational procedures for the delivery of the Mental Capacity Act 2005 Deprivation of Liberty Safeguards (DOLS).

2 INTRODUCTION

2.1 The Mental Capacity Act 2005 (MCA) provides a statutory framework for people who lack capacity to make decisions or take actions for themselves, and others may have to make those decisions on their behalf. When they do this, they should not deprive the person who lacks capacity of their liberty, unless it is essential to do so in the person’s best interests and for their own safety.

2.2 This policy and procedures adds to the guidance in the Mental Capacity Act 2005 Policy and Procedure. It is based on the Deprivation of Liberty Safeguards addendum to the Mental Capacity Act 2005 Code of Practice.

2.3 It provides guidance to anyone who is working with and/or caring for adults who may lack capacity to make particular decisions, and is in a situation where the possibility that there may be deprivation of liberty arises and describes:

- How to avoid deprivation of liberty
- How to identify deprivation of liberty
- What to do when a person may need to be deprived of liberty.

2.4 It is important that the MCA and the Code of Practice are adhered to whenever capacity and best interests issues, and the deprivation of liberty safeguards, are being considered. The deprivation of liberty safeguards are in addition to, and do not replace, other safeguards in the Act.

2.5 The categories of people that are required to have regard to the Code of Practice include anyone who is:

i. An attorney under a Lasting Power of Attorney (LPA)

ii. A deputy appointed by the Court of Protection

iii. Acting as an Independent Mental Capacity Advocate (IMCA)

iv. Carrying out research approved in accordance with the Act

v. Acting in a professional capacity in relation to a person who lacks capacity

vi. Those being paid for acts for, or in relation to, a person who lacks capacity

2.6 The above categories cover a wide range of people that may include:

- Healthcare staff (doctors, dentists, nurses, therapists, radiologists, paramedics etc)
Social care staff (social workers, care managers, etc)

Others who may occasionally be involved in the care of people who lack capacity to make the decision in question, e.g. ambulance crew, police etc.

2.7 People who are being paid for acts for or in relation to a person who lacks capacity include:

- Care assistants in a care home
- Care workers providing domiciliary care services
- Others who have been contracted to provide a service to people who lack capacity to consent to that service necessary to consider all the circumstances of each case. It is not possible to say that any single factor alone would always or could never amount to a deprivation of liberty. Therefore no simple definition can be produced that would apply in every case.

1.4 An authorisation only relates to deprivation of liberty and does not, for example, give authority for any course of treatment.

<td>2.1 ‘… to determine whether there has been a deprivation of liberty, the starting-point must be the specific situation of the individual concerned and account must be taken of a whole range of factors arising in a particular case such as the type, duration, effects and manner of implementation of the measure in question. The distinction between a deprivation of, and restriction upon, liberty is merely one of degree or intensity and not one of nature or substance.’</td>

In March 2014 the UK Supreme Court clarified the test for Deprivation of Liberty for adults who lack capacity to make decisions about their accommodation, including admission to hospital. The “acid test” is:

- The person is under continuous supervision and control and
- is not free to leave, and
- the person lacks capacity to consent to these arrangements

The existence of a deprivation of liberty is not dependent on:

- whether or not they are complying with the requirement to live in their place of care and or treatment and or support
- whether or not they are able physically and or cognitively able to undertake the actions necessary to leave their place of care and or treatment and or support
- whether or not there is total consensus on the person’s place of care or treatment and or support.
- whether or not they have supported access to universal services and other services such as day services
- whether or not that support, to access universal services, is required for their own safety
- whether or not they have unrestricted access to family and other significant others

In addition the essential character of a deprivation of liberty has three components which are:

- The objective component of confinement in a particular restricted place for a not negligible length of time
- The subjective component of a lack of valid consent to the
The Mental Capacity Act 2005 (MCA) / Mental Health Act 1983 (MHA) interface

Section 131 MHA:

The Supreme Court judgment no longer allows for the category of informal patient, such that a patient who meets the “acid test” must either be:

- admitted under S2/3 (etc) of the MHA
- subject to DOLS sections 4A and 4B and Schedules A1 and 1A of the MCA.

Admissions must not fall between the two statutory regimes. Professionals must take into account the following:

Admission under the MHA

The main pointers to relying on the MHA in respect of patients who lack capacity are:

- the patient lacks capacity to consent to these arrangements
- the assessment and proposed treatment is wholly or partly for mental disorder
- the patient meets the criteria under S2 or S3 of the MHA

In respect of psychiatric hospitals, the purpose of the admission will be in the vast majority of cases for the treatment wholly or partly for mental disorder. Therefore, the MHA will be the most appropriate statutory framework for the lawful deprivation of liberty for that individual patient.

Northamptonshire Healthcare NHS Foundation Trust and others v ML [2014] illustrates that the MHA has primacy when it applies.

If the MHA Section is terminated then a DOLS authorisation must be in place with immediate effect.

Admission under the MCA in conjunction with DOLS.

An in-patient on a psychiatric ward could be supported under the DOLS regime under the following circumstances:

- the admission is primarily for welfare reasons
- the patient has finished active treatment and is awaiting discharge

Patients who are non-compliant whilst awaiting discharge will still be subject to active treatment and this should be delivered under the
Mental Health Act

Professionals should apply the above criteria and not assume one regime is “less restrictive” than the other. It is the care plan which imposes the restrictions, not the procedural safeguards.

2.3 Based on existing case law, the following factors may be considered to be relevant when considering whether or not deprivation of liberty is occurring:

- The use of locks or key-pads which stop a person from going out or into different areas of the building
- The use of some medication, for example to calm a person
- Close supervision in the care home or hospital
- Requiring a person to be supervised when out
- Restricting contact with friends, family and acquaintances
- Physically preventing a person from doing something that may cause them harm
- Holding a person so that they can be given care or treatment
- The use of equipment such as bedrails, postural seating, wheelchair straps and splints
- The person having to stay somewhere against their wishes
- The person having to stay somewhere against the wishes of a family member

2.4 All the circumstances of each and every case must be considered, for example:

- What measures are being taken?
- When are they required?
- For what period will they endure?
- What are the effects of any restraint or restrictions?
- Why are they necessary?
- What aim do they seek to meet?
- What are the views of the person, their family or carers?

2.5 Further legal developments may occur after this guidance is issued. Health and social care staff need to keep themselves informed of any legal developments affecting their practice.

3 RESTRAINT

3.1 A person is using restraint if they:

- Use force, or threaten to use force, to make someone do something that they are resisting, or

- Restrict a person’s freedom of movement, whether they are resisting or not

3.2 Restraint is appropriate when it is used to prevent harm to the person who lacks capacity and it is a proportionate response to the likelihood and seriousness of harm.

3.3 The duration of any restrictions is a relevant factor when considering whether a person is deprived of their liberty. If restraint or restriction is frequent, cumulative, and ongoing, then care providers should consider whether this goes beyond permissible restraint and DOLS authorisation is required.

3.4 Although appropriate restraint may lawfully be used under the MCA, it should be seen as an indicator that a person’s wishes may be being over-ridden. In these circumstances the person may be being deprived of their liberty and authorisation is needed.

3.5 In the case of a person in hospital for mental health treatment, the need for restraint is likely to indicate that they are objecting to treatment or to being in hospital.

A person who objects to mental health treatment is ineligible for an authorisation under the deprivation of liberty safeguards. If it is necessary to detain them, use of the Mental Health Act 1983 should be considered.

4 AVOIDING UNLAWFUL DEPRIVATION OF LIBERTY

4.1 Anyone involved in the provision of residential accommodation that might be affected by the deprivation of liberty safeguards should avoid unlawful deprivation of liberty by:

- Seeking to operate care regimes that promote a person’s control over their daily living and maximise their autonomy

4.2 If it is identified that a person is being deprived of their liberty (or is at risk of it), then consideration should be given as to whether the person could be cared for safely with fewer restrictions on them.

4.3 If this is not considered feasible, then an authorisation must be sought in advance of the restrictions being introduced, except in an emergency when an urgent authorisation must be issued at the time the application is made.

4.4 There are lots of ways to reduce the risk of deprivation of liberty, by minimising restrictions and ensuring that decisions are taken involving the person concerned and their family, friends and carers.

The following list highlights elements of good practice that are likely to assist in this and to help avoid the risk of legal challenge:

All decisions should be taken (and reviewed) in a structured way:

</tr>
<tr>

lacks capacity to decide whether or not to accept the care proposed

- A person should not be assumed to lack capacity to make a decision
- All practical and appropriate support to make the decision in question must be provided
- It is also important to identify if a person’s condition has deteriorated and they no longer have capacity to make a decision for themselves
- All decisions about whether a person should be deprived of their liberty must be made within the principles of the MCA
- Before admitting a person to hospital or residential care consideration must always be given to identifying ways to meet the person’s needs in a less restrictive way
- Any restrictions placed on the person while in hospital or in a care home must be kept to the minimum necessary in all the circumstances of the case
- The person who lacks capacity and their family, friends and carers must have access to appropriate information about their care
- The involvement of local advocacy services should be encouraged to support the person and their family, friends and carers
- Proper steps should be taken to help the person to retain contact with family, friends and carers. If, exceptionally, there are good reasons why maintaining contact is not in the person’s best interests, those reasons should be properly documented and explained to the people they affect
- It should be made clear how long the restrictions will be maintained and how the decision can be challenged
- The assessment of capacity and the care plan should be kept under review
- It may well be helpful to include an independent element in reviews

5 AUTHORISATION OF DEPRIVATION OF LIBERTY

5.1 There are some circumstances in which depriving someone who lacks capacity of their liberty is necessary to protect them from harm and would be in their best interests.

However, it is important to note that a deprivation of liberty authorisation does not, in itself, give authority to treat someone.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>PROCEDURE</th>
<th>TASK ALLOCATION</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| 5.2       | A deprivation of liberty can be authorised by the supervisory body (local authority).
To obtain authorisation to deprive someone of their liberty, managing authorities (the hospital or care home in which the person will be deprived of their liberty) have to apply for an authorisation. |
| 5.3       | A standard authorisation must be obtained before the deprivation of liberty begins (see Section 5.7.1).
If the need for the deprivation of liberty is so urgent that it is in the best interests of the person for it to begin while the application is being considered, then the care home or hospital may issue an urgent authorisation for up to seven days.
For details of urgent authorisation see Section 5.7.2 |
| 5.4       | A managing authority has responsibility for applying for authorisation of deprivation of liberty.
5.4.1 In the case of an NHS hospital, the managing authority is the NHS body responsible for the running of the hospital in which a person potentially coming within the scope of the deprivation of liberty safeguards is, or is to be, a resident.
5.4.2 In the case of a care home or a private hospital, the managing authority will be the person registered, or required to be registered, under part 2 of the Care Standards Act 2000 in respect of the hospital or care home. |
| 5.5       | If a healthcare or social care professional considers, for example as a result of a care review or needs assessment, that an application for authorisation should be made they should inform the managing authority. |
| 5.6       | The supervisory body is responsible for considering requests, commissioning assessments and, where all the assessments agree, authorising deprivation of liberty.
5.6.1 Where the deprivation of liberty safeguards are applied to a person in a care home or hospital in England, the supervisory body will be the local authority for the area in which the person is ordinarily resident. However, if the person is not ordinarily resident in the area of any local authority (for example of no fixed abode), the supervisory body is the local authority for the area in which the care home or hospital is situated.
The supervisory body responsibilities of the National Assembly for Wales remain unchanged. The National Assembly is the supervisory body in all cases where care and/or treatment in hospital is commissioned by the National Assembly or a Local Health Board (LHB) unless the person has ordinary residence in England. |
| 5.7       | There are two types of authorisation: standard and urgent.
5.7.1 Standard Authorisation.
A managing authority must request a standard authorisation when it appears likely that, either currently or at some time during the next 28 days, someone will be accommodated in their hospital or care home in circumstances that amount to a deprivation of liberty.

The request must be made to the supervisory body.

5.7.2 Urgent Authorisation.

Whenever possible, authorisation should be obtained in advance.

Where this is not possible, and the managing authority believes it is necessary to deprive someone of their liberty in their best interests before the standard authorisation process can be completed, the managing authority must itself grant an urgent authorisation and then obtain standard authorisation within seven calendar days.

5.8 Before applying for an authorisation, the managing authority needs to consider, in consultation with the family where possible, whether the person meets the qualifying requirements (see Appendix A).

5.9 The Application Process:

When a managing authority applies for a standard authorisation, it must do so by sending the appropriate DOLS form by email (dols@rochdale.gov.uk) to the DOLS team at Rochdale Borough Council who is the Supervisory Body for care commissioned by . DOLs forms can be requested by phoning 0800 303 8886 and asking for the DOLS team.

5.10 Applications by a care home:

If the care is known to be commissioned by or on behalf of a different local authority, then the application should be sent to that local authority.

If the care is not commissioned by or on behalf of a local authority, the application should be sent to the local authority where the person currently resides.

If the care home does not know where the person currently lives, or if the person does not live in England or Wales, the application should be sent to the care home’s local authority.

5.11 Applications by a hospital:

Applications should be sent to the local authority where the person is ordinarily resident.

If the person is not ordinarily resident in the area of any local authority (for example of no fixed abode), the application should be sent to the local authority for the area in which the hospital is situated.

5.12 The managing authority should tell the relevant person’s family, friends and carers that it has applied for an authorisation for deprivation of liberty.

5.13 The views of the relevant person about who to inform and consult should be taken into account.
5.14 The managing authority must notify the supervisory body if it concludes that there is nobody appropriate to consult in determining the person’s best interests.

In such a case, the supervisory body must instruct an IMCA to represent and support the relevant person (See Section 7).

5.15 Upon receipt of an application for authorisation of deprivation of liberty, the supervisory body will as soon as is practical and possible:

- consider whether the request is appropriate and should be pursued, and
- seek any further information that it requires from the managing authority to help it with the decision.

5.16 If the supervisory body has any doubts about proceeding with the request, it should seek to resolve them with the managing authority.

5.17 A standard authorisation may come into force at a specific time after it is given, e.g. when authorisation is sought as part of care planning (such as discharge planning from hospital). But an authorisation cannot be given too far in advance as this might mean that an assessor cannot make an accurate assessment of what the person’s circumstances will be by the time the authorisation comes into force.

5.18 There may be cases in which the supervisory body considers that an application for an authorisation has been made too far in advance. This might mean that an assessor could not make an accurate assessment of what the person’s circumstances will be by the time the authorisation comes into force. In such a case, the supervisory body may agree with the managing authority that the application should be resubmitted at a more appropriate time.

6 DEPRIVATION OF LIBERTY ASSESSMENTS

6.1 As soon as the supervisory body has confirmed that the request should be pursued, it must obtain the relevant assessments to ascertain whether the qualifying requirements are met.

6.2 Assessments must be completed within 21 days, or 7 days if an urgent authorisation has been granted.

6.3 The assessments are:

- Age assessment
- Mental health assessment
- Mental capacity assessment
- Best interests assessment
- Eligibility assessment
- No refusals assessment
For further details of the assessments see Section 6.17

6.4 If the supervisory body is not in the same geographical area as the care home or hospital, they should arrange to use assessors based in the person’s area.

6.5 If an ‘equivalent assessment’ to any of these assessments has already been obtained, it may be relied upon instead of obtaining a fresh assessment.

6.6 An equivalent assessment is an assessment:

- That has been carried out in the preceding 12 months
- That meets all the requirements of the deprivation of liberty assessment
- Of which the supervisory body accepts and sees no reason why it should no longer be accurate.
- Of which the supervisory body has a written copy

6.7 Supervisory bodies are advised to record the reasons if a decision is taken to use an equivalent assessment.

6.8 All assessments required for a standard authorisation must be completed within 21 calendar days from the date on which the supervisory body receives a request from a managing authority.

6.9 If an urgent authorisation is already in force, the assessments must be completed before the expiry of that authorisation.

6.10 Urgent authorisations may be given for an initial seven-day period, and may, in exceptional circumstances, be extended by the supervisory body for up to a further seven days.

6.11 The six assessments do not have to be completed by six different assessors. However, each assessor must make their own decisions and to ensure that an appropriate degree of objectivity is brought to the assessment process:

- There must be a minimum of two assessors
- The mental health and best interests assessors must be different people
- The best interests assessor can be an employee of the supervisory body or managing authority but must not be involved in either the care of the person they are assessing or in decisions about their care
- A potential best interests assessor should not be used if they are in a line management relationship with the professional proposing the deprivation of liberty or the mental health assessor
- None of the assessors may have a personal financial interest in the care of the person they are assessing
• The assessor must not be a relative of the person being assessed nor of a person with a financial interest in the person’s care.

For this purpose, a ‘relative’ is a:

• spouse, ex-spouse, civil partner or ex-civil partner

• person living with the relevant person as if they were a spouse or civil partner

• parent or child

• brother or sister

• child of a person falling within definitions a, b, or d

• grandparent or grandchild

• grandparent-in-law or grandchild-in-law

• aunt or uncle

• sister-in-law or brother-in-law

• son-in-law or daughter-in-law

• first cousin

• half-brother or half-sister

These relationships include step-relationships

6.12 Other relevant factors for supervisory bodies to consider when appointing assessors include:

• The reason for the proposed deprivation of liberty

• Whether the potential assessor has experience of working with the service user group from which the person being assessed comes

• Whether the potential assessor has experience of working with people from the cultural background of the person being assessed.

6.13 Assessors act as individual professionals and are personally accountable as such for their decisions. Managing authorities and supervisory bodies must not dictate or seek to influence their decisions.

6.14 Nobody can or should carry out an assessment, other than an age assessment, unless they covered by indemnity in respect of any liabilities that might arise in connection with carrying out the assessment.
PROCEDURE

| 6.15 | If a single body is both supervisory body and managing authority (e.g. where a local authority itself provides a residential care home) this does not prevent it from acting in both capacities. | Local Authority |
|      | However, the best interests assessor cannot be an employee of the supervisory body / managing authority, e.g. in a case involving a local authority care home, the best interests assessor could be an NHS employee or an independent practitioner. | Local Authority |
| 6.16 | If there is nobody appropriate to consult, other than people engaged in providing care or treatment for the relevant person in a professional capacity, the managing authority must notify the supervisory body when it submits the application for the deprivation of liberty authorisation. The supervisory body must then instruct an IMCA straight away to represent the person. (See Section 7) | Local Authority |

THE ASSESSMENT PROCESS:

Age Assessment

- 6.17.1.1 The purpose of the age assessment is simply to confirm whether the relevant person is aged 18 or over. Age Assessor

- 6.17.1.2 This assessment can be undertaken by anybody whom the supervisory body thinks is suitable to undertake it. This includes a person who is conducting one or more of the other assessments.

Mental Health Assessment

- 6.17.2.1 The purpose of the mental health assessment is to establish whether the relevant person is suffering from a mental disorder or learning disability. Mental Health Assessor

- 6.17.2.2 This is not an assessment to determine whether the person requires mental health treatment.

- 6.17.2.3 This assessment must be carried out by a doctor, and the assessing doctor either has to be approved under section 12 of the Mental Health Act 1983 or be a registered medical practitioner who has special experience in the diagnosis and treatment of mental disorder.

- Whether or not the assessor is section 12 approved, they must have completed the appropriate MCA mental health assessor training.

- 6.17.2.4 Supervisory bodies must:
  - be satisfied that the assessor has the required skills and competencies
  - consider the suitability of the assessor appointed to the particular case, for example whether they have experience relevant to the person's condition
  - should consider using a doctor who is eligible to carry out the assessment and who already knows the relevant person to undertake this assessment if they think it would be of benefit.

6.17.4.5 The Role of The Best Interests Assessor:

a) The best interests assessor is the person who is responsible for assessing the best interests of a relevant person for whom a managing authority has applied for authorisation to deprive them of their liberty.

b) The first task of a best interests assessor is to establish whether deprivation of liberty is occurring, or is going to occur.

c) If the best interests assessor concludes that deprivation of liberty is not occurring and is not likely to occur, they should inform the supervisory body that deprivation of liberty is not in the person’s best interests because there is a less restrictive option available. The assessor must inform the supervisory body that the best interests requirement is not met.

d) The best interests assessor must consult the managing authority of the relevant hospital or care home and examine any relevant needs assessments and care plans prepared in connection with the relevant person being accommodated in the hospital or care home.

e) The best interests assessor must consider whether the proposed care plan and the manner in which it will be implemented would constitute a deprivation of liberty. If it would not, then no deprivation of liberty authorisation would be required for that care plan.

6.17.4.6 The Best Interests Assessment Process:

a) If the best interests assessor considers that deprivation of liberty is or will be occurring, they should start a full best interests assessment.

This involves seeking the views of the following about whether they believe that depriving the relevant person of their liberty is, or would be, in the person’s best interests:

- anyone engaged in caring for the person
- family members
- anyone interested in the person’s welfare
- any IMCA who has been instructed
- anyone named by the relevant person who should be consulted
- staff involved in the person’s care.

b) The best interests assessor must state in their assessment the name and address of every interested person whom they have consulted.
c) They must also involve the person they are assessing in the assessment process as much as is possible and help them to participate in decision-making.

d) They will also need to consider the conclusions of the mental health assessor about how the person being assessed is likely to be affected by being deprived of their liberty.

If the proposed care would involve the person being moved, then the assessor should consider the impact of the upheaval and of the journey itself on the person.

e) If the best interests assessment supports deprivation of liberty in the care home or hospital in question, the assessor should state for how long any authorisation should be given, with a maximum period of 12 months.

f) This recommendation should be based on the information obtained during the consultation process, especially about how long any treatment will last, and any details about how likely it is that the relevant person's circumstances will change.

g) The underlying principle is that deprivation of liberty should be for the minimum period necessary so, for the maximum 12-month period to apply, the assessor will need to be confident that there is unlikely to be a change in the person's circumstances which would affect the authorisation within that timescale.

6.17.4.7 The Report of the Best Interests Assessor:

a) The best interests assessor will need to give reasons for their conclusion in the report of their assessment. If they do not support deprivation of liberty, then their report should aim to be as useful as possible in deciding on future action, e.g. recommending how deprivation of liberty could be avoided.

In such a case, it may also be helpful for the best interests assessor to discuss the matter with the providers of care during the assessment process.

b) The best interests assessor may recommend that conditions should be attached to the authorisation.

c) Conditions may also be recommended to work towards avoiding deprivation of liberty in future.

d) Conditions should not be a substitute for a properly constructed care plan.

e) In recommending conditions, best interests assessors should aim to impose the minimum necessary constraints, so that they do not unnecessarily prevent or inhibit the staff of the hospital or care home from responding appropriately to the person's needs, whether they remain the same or vary over time.

f) It would be good practice for the assessor to discuss any proposed conditions with the relevant personnel at the home or hospital before finalising the assessment.
Where possible, the best interests assessor should also recommend someone to be appointed as the ‘relevant person’s representative’ (see Section 7).

The appointment of the relevant person’s representative cannot take place unless and until the authorisation is given, but by identifying someone to take on this role at an early stage; the best interests assessor can help to ensure that a representative is appointed as soon as possible.

6.17.5 Eligibility Assessment

6.17.5.1 This assessment relates specifically to the relevant person’s status, or potential status, under the MHA 1983 and aims to confirm whether the relevant person should be covered by that Act rather than the deprivation of liberty safeguards under the MCA.

6.17.5.2 For most authorisations sought by care homes, the eligibility assessment will effectively be irrelevant.

6.17.5.3 A person is not eligible for a deprivation of liberty authorisation if:

- They are, at the time of the authorisation, detained as a hospital in-patient under the Mental Health Act 1983, or
- The authorisation, if granted, would be inconsistent with an obligation placed on them under the MHA, such as a requirement to live somewhere else.

6.17.5.4 In addition, if the proposed authorisation relates to deprivation of liberty in a hospital wholly or partly for the purpose of treatment of mental disorder, then the person will not be eligible if:

- They are currently on leave of absence from detention under the MHA, or subject to Supervised Community Treatment or conditional discharge in which case powers of recall under the MHA should be used, or
- They object to being admitted to hospital, or to some or all the treatment they will receive there for mental disorder, and they meet the criteria for an application for admission under the MHA.

6.17.5.5 In many cases, a patient will be perfectly able to state such an objection. However, where the patient is unable to communicate, or can only communicate to a limited extent, assessors will need to consider the patient’s behaviour, wishes, feelings, views, beliefs and values, both present and past, so far as they can be ascertained. If there is reason to think that a patient would object if able to do so, then the patient should be assumed to be objecting.

6.17.5.6 Assessors should always bear in mind that their job is simply to establish whether the patient objects to treatment – the reasonableness of that objection is not the issue.

6.17.5.7 The eligibility assessment will often be carried out by the best interests assessor but, where this is not the case, the eligibility assessor must seek and take account of the views of the best interests assessor in deciding whether the person objects to being in hospital or to treatment for mental disorder.

6.17.5.8 Even where a patient does not object and a deprivation of liberty authorisation is possible, it should not be assumed that such an authorisation is invariably the correct course.

There may be other factors that suggest that the Mental Health Act 1983 should be used (for example, where it is thought likely that the person will recover relevant capacity and will then refuse to consent to treatment, or where it is important for the hospital managers to have a formal power to retake a person who goes absent without leave).

6.17.6 When patients are assessed as ineligible

6.17.6.1 If the eligibility assessor believes that the patient is not eligible, but they nevertheless should be deprived of liberty in their best interests, the eligibility assessor should immediately take steps to arrange for appropriate action to be taken under the MHA.

6.17.6.2 In the case of someone already subject to the MHA, the eligibility assessor should contact the clinician in overall charge of the patient’s treatment or, if the person is subject to guardianship, the relevant local social services authority.

6.17.7 The Eligibility Assessor:

6.17.7.1 The regulations for England specify that anybody that the supervisory body considers to be appropriate, by virtue of possessing the necessary experience and meeting the training and skills specifications, may undertake the eligibility assessment.

In most cases, it should be carried out by a person conducting one or more of the other assessments.

6.17.7.2 Where the eligibility assessor and best interests assessor are different people, the eligibility assessor, in undertaking the assessment, must seek information from the best interests assessor about the person’s attitude to the arrangements being made for their care and treatment.

6.17.8 No Refusals Assessment

6.17.8.1 The purpose of the no refusals assessment is to establish whether an authorisation to deprive a person who lacks capacity to consent of their liberty would conflict with other existing authority for decision-making for that person.

6.17.8.2 The following examples show instances of a conflict which would mean that a standard authorisation could not be given:

- If the relevant person has made an advance decision that remains valid and is applicable to some or all of the treatment that the person would receive if authorisation were granted

- If any part of the proposal to deprive the person of their liberty (including any element of the care plan) would be in conflict with a valid decision of a donee of a Lasting Power of Attorney or a deputy appointed by the court order to ensure that an unauthorised deprivation of liberty is not permitted to continue in these circumstances. The person’s care plan and the provision of care must be reviewed immediately and the changes made as soon as possible.

The steps taken to end the deprivation of liberty should be recorded in the care plan. Where possible it will be important to involve family, friends and carers in deciding how to prevent the unauthorised deprivation of liberty from continuing.

6.20 The managing authority can itself give an urgent authorisation for deprivation of liberty where it:

- is required to make a request to the supervisory body for a standard authorisation, but believes that the need for a person to be deprived of liberty is so urgent that it is appropriate to begin the deprivation before the request is made, or
- has made a request for a standard authorisation but believes that the need for a person to be deprived of liberty has now become so urgent that it is appropriate to begin the deprivation before the request is dealt with by the supervisory body.

This means that an urgent authorisation can never be issued without a request for a standard authorisation being made.

6.21 Urgent authorisations should normally only be used in response to sudden unforeseen needs but may also be used in care planning (for example, to avoid delays in transfer for rehabilitation where delay would reduce the likely benefit of the rehabilitation).

6.22 Any decision to issue an urgent authorisation and take action that deprives a person of liberty must be in the person’s best interests.

6.23 The managing authority must decide the period for which the urgent authorisation is given, but this must not exceed 7 days.

6.24 The authorisation must be in writing and must state the:

- name of the relevant person
- name of the relevant hospital or care home
- period for which the authorisation is to be in force
- purpose for which the authorisation is given.

6.25 Supervisory bodies and managing authorities should have a procedure in place that identifies:

- What action should be taken when it is necessary to make use of the urgent authorisation process
- By whom the action should be taken, and within what timescale.

Once a standard authorisation has been granted, supervisory bodies must appoint a relevant person’s representative as soon as possible to represent the person who has been deprived of their liberty.

If the person has an unpaid relevant person’s representative, both they and their representative are entitled to the support of an independent mental capacity advocate (Section 39D IMCA).

The role of the relevant person’s representative is to:

- to maintain contact with the relevant person
- to represent and support the relevant person in all matters relating to the operation of the deprivation of liberty safeguards, including, if appropriate, triggering a review, using an organisation’s complaints procedure on the person’s behalf or making an application to the Court of Protection.

As soon as possible after an authorisation is issued, the managing authority must take all practical and appropriate steps to ensure that the relevant person and their representative understand:

- the effect of the authorisation
- their right to request a review
- the formal and informal complaints procedures that are available to them
- their right to make an application to the Court of Protection to seek variation or termination of the authorization
- their right to request the support of an IMCA.

In providing information to the person and their representative, the managing authority should take account of the communication and language needs of both the person and their representative.

To be eligible to be a relevant person’s representative, a person must be:

- 18 years of age or over
- willing to be appointed
- able to keep in contact with the relevant person.

The person must not be:

- prevented by ill health from carrying out the role of representative
- financially interested in the relevant person’s managing authority
- a close relative of a person who is financially interested in the managing authority
- if the person is deprived of liberty in a care home, employed by, or providing services to, that care home
- if the person is deprived of liberty in hospital, employed to work at that hospital in a role that is or could be related to the
Procedure

| Task Allocation |
|-----------------|-----------------|
| relevant person’s case, employed to work in the relevant person’s supervisory body |

7.6
The appointment of a relevant person’s representative is in addition to, and does not affect, any appointment of an attorney or deputy.

The functions of the representative are in addition to, and do not affect, the authority of any attorney, the powers of any deputy or any powers of the court.

7.7
There is no presumption that a relevant person’s representative should be the same as the person who would be their nearest relative for the purposes of the MHA.

7.8
The process of identifying a representative should begin as soon as possible.

Normally, this should be when the best interests assessor is appointed – even if one or more of the other assessments has not yet been completed. This is because the best interests assessor must, as part of the assessment process, identify if there is anyone they would recommend to become the relevant person’s representative.

The best interests assessor should discuss the representative role with the people interviewed as part of the assessment.

7.9
The best interests assessor should firstly establish whether the person potentially being deprived of liberty has the capacity to select their own representative and, if so, invite them to do so. If the relevant person has capacity and selects an eligible person the best interests assessor must recommend that person to the supervisory body for appointment.

7.10
If there is an attorney or deputy with the appropriate authority, they may select the person to be recommended as the relevant person’s representative where the relevant person lacks capacity to do so. If an attorney or deputy selects an eligible person then the best interests assessor must recommend that person to the supervisory body for appointment.

7.11
It is up to the best interests assessor to confirm whether any representative proposed by the person, an attorney or deputy is eligible. If the best interests assessor decides that a proposed representative is not eligible, they must advise the person who made the selection and invite them to make a further selection.

7.12
If neither the person concerned, nor an attorney or deputy, selects an eligible person, then the best interests assessor must consider whether they are able to identify someone eligible who could act as the relevant person’s representative.

7.13
In making a recommendation, the assessor will wish to consider, and balance, factors such as:

- Does the person concerned have a preference?
- Will the proposed representative be able to keep in contact with the person?
• Does the person appear to trust and feel comfortable with the proposed representative?

• Would the proposed representative be able to represent the person effectively?

• Is the proposed representative likely to represent the person's best interests?

In most cases, the best interests assessor will be able to check at the same time that the person is willing to be the representative.

7.14 It should not be assumed that the representative needs to be someone who supports the deprivation of liberty.

7.15 The best interests assessor must not select a representative where the relevant person, an attorney or a deputy objects to that selection.

7.16 If the best interests assessor is unable to recommend anybody to be the relevant person's representative, the assessor must notify the supervisory body accordingly.

The supervisory body must then itself identify an eligible person to be appointed as the representative, following the conditions set out above.

The supervisory body cannot select a person from among family, friends and informal carers who has not been recommended by the best interests assessor.

7.17 The supervisory body may pay the person that they select to provide this service. The service could be commissioned through an advocacy services provider, ensuring that the service provides effective independent representation for the person deprived of liberty.

7.18 When selecting a suitable representative for a person, the supervisory body should pay particular attention to the communication and cultural needs of the relevant person.

7.19 The supervisory body must invite the person recommended by the best interests assessor to become the relevant person's representative. If the best interests assessor does not recommend someone, then the supervisory body should invite the person it has identified. If the person is willing to become the representative, the supervisory body must appoint them.

If the person refuses, a further eligible person must be identified and invited to become the representative. This process must continue until an eligible person is appointed.

7.20 The appointment of a relevant person’s representative must be in writing, stating the date of expiry, which must be for the period of the standard authorisation.

Copies must be sent to:
The person appointed must confirm in writing that they are willing to take on the role.

It is important that the person should be in ongoing contact with their representative. In order to fulfill their role, the representative will need to be able to have face-to-face contact with the person.

That means that the care home or hospital should accommodate visits by the representative at reasonable times. Details about who the person’s representative is should be recorded in the person’s health and social care records.

Managing authorities and supervisory bodies should inform the relevant person’s representative about sources of support and information available to help them in the role, including how to access the support of an IMCA.

If the representative ceases to maintain contact with the relevant person, for whatever reason, the person may effectively be unable to access their review and appeal rights.

For this reason, the managing authority will need to consider informing the supervisory body if the representative does not maintain contact with the person.

The managing authority might consider it appropriate to raise the matter with the representative initially, before notifying the supervisory body if the representative still does not maintain regular contact with the relevant person.

The appointment of a relevant person’s representative will be terminated in any of the following circumstances:

- The standard authorisation comes to an end and a new authorisation is not applied for or, if applied for, is not granted
- The relevant person, if they have capacity to do so, selects a different person to be their representative, and that person is eligible and willing to take on the role
- An attorney or deputy selects a different person to be the representative, and that person is eligible and willing to take on the role
- The representative informs the supervisory body in writing that they are no longer willing or eligible to continue in the role
- The supervisory body becomes aware that the relevant person’s representative is not keeping in touch with the person
- The supervisory body becomes aware that the relevant person’s representative is no longer eligible
PROCEDURE

- If it becomes apparent that the relevant person’s representative is not acting in the person’s best interests
- The relevant person’s representative dies.

| 7.27 | If the supervisory body considers that the representative may not be keeping in touch, or is no longer eligible, it should contact the representative to clarify the position before deciding whether to terminate the appointment. | Local Authority |

| 7.28 | When the appointment of a relevant person’s representative ends, the supervisory body must give notice to the representative, and should also inform the relevant person, every interested person consulted by the best interests assessor and the managing authority of the relevant hospital or care home. This notice should be given as soon as possible, stating when the appointment ended and the reason why. | Local Authority |

| 7.29 | When the appointment of a relevant person’s representative ends but the lawful deprivation of liberty continues, the supervisory body must identify a suitable replacement representative as soon as possible. | All to note |

| 7.30 | If a replacement representative is being selected because the appointment of the current representative is to end, then a person qualified to be a best interests assessor will need to be appointed to make the selection. | IMCA |

8 INSTRUCTING AN IMCA TO ACT WHEN THERE IS NO RELEVANT PERSON’S REPRESENTATIVE AVAILABLE

| 8.1 | A person who is being deprived of their liberty will be in a particularly vulnerable position during any gaps in the appointment of a relevant person’s representative, since there may be nobody to represent their interests or to apply for a review on their behalf. In these circumstances, if there is nobody who can support and represent the person (other than a person engaged in providing care and treatment for the relevant person in a professional capacity or for remuneration), the managing authority must notify the supervisory body, who must instruct an IMCA to represent the relevant person until a new representative is appointed. | All to note |

| 8.2 | The role of the IMCA during their period of appointment is essentially the same as that of the relevant person’s representative. Once a relevant person’s representative is appointed, this role of the IMCA ends. | Hospital / Care Home & Local Authority |

| 8.3 | However, after the representative has been appointed, the IMCA may still apply to the Court of Protection for permission to take the relevant person’s case to the Court in connection with the giving of a standard authorisation but, in doing so, the IMCA must take the views of the relevant person’s representative on the matter into account. | IMCA |

9 INSTRUCTING AN IMCA TO ACT TO SUPPORT THE PERSON OR THEIR REPRESENTATIVE

| 9.1 | Both a person who is deprived of liberty under a standard | Local Authority | authorisation and their representative have the statutory right of access to an IMCA.
It is the responsibility of the supervisory body to instruct an IMCA if the person or their representative requests one.

9.2 The role of the IMCA is to explain the authorisation to them: what it means, why it has been granted, why it is considered that the person meets the criteria for authorisation, how long it will last and how to trigger a review or challenge in the Court of Protection.

9.3 The IMCA will have the right to make submissions to the supervisory body on the question of whether a qualifying requirement is reviewable or to give information, or make submissions to any assessor carrying out a review assessment.

9.4 An IMCA must be instructed if this is requested by the person or their representative. A request may be made more than once during the period of the authorisation.

9.5 In addition, if the supervisory body has reason to believe that the review and Court of Protection safeguards might not be used without the support of an IMCA, then they must instruct an IMCA.

10 IMCA RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES

10.1 An IMCA instructed at the initial stage of the deprivation of liberty safeguards process has additional rights and responsibilities compared to an IMCA more generally instructed under the MCA.

IMCAs in this context have the right to:

- give information or make submissions to assessors, which assessors must take into account in carrying out their assessments
- receive from the supervisory body copies of any deprivation of liberty assessments that the supervisory body are given
- receive a copy of a standard authorisation
- be notified by the supervisory body if they are unable to give a standard authorisation because all the deprivation of liberty assessments did not come to a positive conclusion
- receive a copy of any urgent authorisation from the managing authority
- receive from the supervisory body a copy of a notice declining to extend the duration of an urgent authorization
- receive from the supervisory body a copy of a notice that an urgent authorisation has ceased to be in force
- apply to the Court of Protection for permission to take the relevant person’s case to the Court in connection with a matter relating to the giving or refusal of a standard or urgent authorisation (in the same way as any other third party).

10.2 An IMCA will need to familiarise themselves with the circumstances of the person to whom the deprivation of liberty safeguards are being applied, and to consider what they may need to tell any of the assessors during the course of the assessment process. They will also need to consider whether they have any concerns about the outcome

10.3 Differences of opinion

Differences of opinion between an IMCA and an assessor should ideally be resolved while the assessment is still in progress. Where there are significant disagreements between an IMCA and one or more of the assessors that cannot be resolved between them, the supervisory body should be informed before the assessment is finalised.

10.4 IMCA's Role

An IMCA will also need to consider whether they have any concerns about the giving of an urgent authorisation, and whether it would be appropriate to challenge the giving of such an authorisation via the Court of Protection.

10.5 IMCA's Role Post-Appointment

Once a relevant person’s representative is appointed the role of the IMCA falls away. However, the IMCA may still:

- Apply to the Court of Protection for permission to take the relevant person’s case to the Court in connection with the giving of a standard authorization
- Be instructed during gaps in the appointment of a relevant person’s representative
- Be instructed to assist the relevant person and their representative either on their request or if a supervisory body believes that appointing an IMCA will help to ensure that the person’s rights are protected

10.6 IMCA's Continuing Role

The roles of the Relevant Person’s Representative and of the IMCA are not mutually exclusive, and the Relevant Person’s Representative is entitled to have an IMCA to provide additional advocacy support as and when needed.

11 REVIEWS

11.1 Monitoring

In all cases where a person is deprived of their liberty, the managing authority has a duty to monitor the case on an ongoing basis to see if the person’s circumstances change – which might mean they no longer need to be deprived of their liberty.

11.2 Hospital / Care Home

The managing authority must set out in the care plan clear roles and responsibilities for monitoring and confirm under what circumstances a review is necessary.

11.3 Local Authority

The supervisory body must carry out a review if requested to do so by the person concerned, their representative or the managing authority, and may also carry out a review at any other time. There are no restrictions on when a review can be requested.

11.4 Hospital / Care Home

In general, the grounds for requesting a review are that:

- The relevant person no longer meets all of the six qualifying requirements
11.5 An authorisation only permits deprivation of liberty: it does not mean that a person has to be deprived of liberty. If a care home or hospital decides that deprivation of liberty is no longer necessary then they must end it immediately, by adjustment of the care regime or whatever other change is appropriate.

11.6 When a supervisory body receives a request for a review, it must first decide which, if any, of the qualifying requirements need to be reviewed:

- If the supervisory body concludes that none of the qualifying requirements need to be reviewed, it need take no further action
- If one or more of the qualifying requirements appear to be reviewable, the supervisory body must arrange for a separate review assessment to be carried out in relation to each reviewable requirement

The supervisory body should record the reasons for decisions.

11.7 Where the supervisory body decides that the best interests requirement should be reviewed solely because details of the conditions attached to the authorisation need to be changed, and the review request does not include evidence that there is a significant change in the person’s case, there is no need for a full reassessment. The supervisory body can simply vary the conditions attached to the authorisation as appropriate.

11.8 If the review relates to any of the other requirements, or to a significant change in the person’s situation under the best interests requirement, the supervisory body must obtain a new assessment.

11.9 If the assessment shows that the requirement is still met, then the supervisory body must consider whether the reason that it is met has changed from the reason originally stated on the authorisation and make any appropriate amendments. In addition, if the review relates to the best interests requirement, the supervisory body must consider whether any conditions should be varied in view of the outcome of the assessment.

11.10 If any of the criteria are not fulfilled, then the authorisation must be terminated immediately.

11.11 The supervisory body must give written notice of the outcome of a review to the care home or hospital, the relevant person, the representative and the IMCA, if an IMCA is involved.

11.12 Short-term suspension of authorization:
There are separate review arrangements in cases in which the

12 CONCERNS THAT A PERSON IS BEING DEPRIVED OF THEIR LIBERTY WITHOUT AUTHORISATION

12.1 Depriving someone who lacks capacity to consent of their liberty without authorisation is a serious issue. If anyone believes that a person is being deprived of their liberty without authorisation, they should raise this with the relevant authorities as described below.

12.2 If the conclusion is that the person is being deprived of their liberty unlawfully, this will normally result in a change in their care arrangements, or in an application for a deprivation of liberty authorisation being made.

12.3 If a person themselves, any relative, friend or Carer or any other third party (such as a person carrying out an inspection visit or a member of an advocacy organisation) believes that a person is being deprived of liberty without the managing authority having applied for an authorisation, they should draw this to the attention of the managing authority, asking them to apply for an authorisation. Given the seriousness of deprivation of liberty, a managing authority would normally be expected to respond within 24 hours.

12.4 If the concerned person has done this, but the managing authority has not applied for an authorisation within a reasonable period, the concerned person has a right to ask the supervisory body to decide whether there is an unauthorised deprivation of liberty.

12.5 In such circumstances, the supervisory body must select and appoint a person who would be suitable and eligible to carry out a best interests assessment to investigate whether the person is deprived of liberty.

12.6 The exception to this is if the supervisory body believes that:

- the concern they have received is frivolous or vexatious (for example, where the person is very obviously not deprived of their liberty)

- the question of whether or not there is an unauthorised deprivation of liberty has already been decided, and since that decision, there has been no change of circumstances that would merit the question being decided again.

The supervisory body should record the reasons for their decisions.

12.7 The supervisory body must notify the person who raised the concern, the relevant person, the managing authority of the relevant hospital or care home and any appointed IMCA:

- that it has been to asked to assess whether or not there is an unauthorised deprivation of liberty

PROCEDURE

- whether or not it has decided to commission an assessment
- where relevant, who has been appointed as assessor

| 12.8 | Where an assessment of whether an unlawful deprivation of liberty is occurring is necessary, it must be carried out within seven days. |
| 12.9 | The person nominated to undertake the assessment must consult the managing authority of the relevant hospital or care home, and examine any relevant needs assessments and care plans to consider whether they constitute a deprivation of liberty. They will also speak to the person who raised the concern about why they believe that the relevant person is being deprived of their liberty and consult, as far as is possible, with the relevant person’s family and friends. If there is nobody appropriate to consult among family and friends, they should inform the supervisory body who must arrange for an IMCA to be instructed to support and represent the person. |
| 12.10 | There are three possible outcomes of an assessment. The assessor may conclude that: |
  - the person is not being deprived of their liberty |
  - the person is being lawfully deprived of their liberty because authorisation exists. (This, though, is an unlikely outcome since the supervisory body should already be aware if any authorisation exists, thus rendering any assessment in response to a third party request unnecessary.) |
  - the person is being deprived of their liberty unlawfully. |
| 12.11 | The supervisory body must notify the third party who made the request, the relevant person, the managing authority of the relevant hospital or care home and any appointed IMCA of the outcome of the assessment. |
| 12.12 | If the outcome of the investigation is that there is an unauthorised deprivation of liberty then the full assessment process should be completed as if a standard authorisation for deprivation of liberty had been applied for. |
| 12.13 | If the managing authority considers that the care regime should continue while the assessments are carried out, it will be required to issue an urgent authorisation and to obtain a standard authorisation within seven days. |
| 12.14 | If the concerned person does not accept the outcome of their request for assessment they can apply to the Court of Protection to hear their case. |

APPLICATION TO THE COURT OF PROTECTION

| 13.1 | The relevant person, or someone acting on their behalf, may make an application to the Court of Protection before a decision has been reached on an application for authorisation. Such an application to the court might seek a declaration as to whether | All to note | the relevant person has capacity, or whether an act done or proposed to be done in relation to that person is lawful (this may include deciding if the action is in the best interests of the person).

13.2 Once a standard authorisation has been given, the relevant person or their representative has the right to apply to the Court of Protection to determine any question relating to the following:

- whether the relevant person meets one or more of the qualifying requirements
- the period during which the standard authorisation is to be in force
- the purpose for which the standard authorisation is given
- the conditions subject to which the standard authorisation is given.

13.3 Where an urgent authorisation has been given, the relevant person or any other person acting on his or her behalf has the right to apply to the Court of Protection to determine any question relating to the following matters:

- whether the urgent authorisation should have been given
- the period during which the urgent authorisation is to be in force
- the purpose for which the urgent authorisation has been given.

13.4 Where a standard or urgent authorisation has been given, any other person may also apply to the Court of Protection for permission to take the relevant person’s case to the Court to decide whether the authorisation should have been given.

13.5 People should not be discouraged from making an application to the Court of Protection if it proves impossible to resolve concerns satisfactorily through other routes in a timely manner.

The following people have an automatic right of access to the Court of Protection and do not have to seek permission from the court to make an application:

- A person who lacks, or is alleged to lack, capacity in relation to a specific decision or action
- The donor of a Lasting Power of Attorney to whom an application relates, or their donee
- A deputy who has been appointed by the court to act for the person concerned
- A person named in an existing court order to which the application relates
PROCEDURE

The relevant person’s representative

13.6 The Court may make an order:

- varying or terminating a standard or urgent authorization
- directing the supervisory body (in the case of a standard authorization) or the managing authority (in the case of an urgent authorization) to vary or terminate the authorization

14 MONITORING THE SAFEGUARDS

14.1 Responsibility for the inspection process of the operation of the deprivation of liberty safeguards will rest with the Care Quality Commission.

14.2 In summary, the inspection body will monitor the manner in which the deprivation of liberty safeguards are being operated by:

- Visiting hospitals and care homes
- Interviewing people accommodated in hospitals and care homes
- Inspecting relevant records
- Checking that the safeguards are working properly
- Looking at the protocols and procedures in place.

14.3 Supervisory bodies and managing authorities should keep their protocols and procedures under review and supervisory bodies should assess the nature of the authorisations they are granting in light of their local population. This information may be relevant to policy decisions about commissioning care and support services.

15 CHECKLISTS

15.1 Key points for care homes and hospitals (managing authorities)

- Managing authorities need to incorporate consideration of whether a person has capacity to consent to the services which are to be provided and whether their actions are likely to result in a deprivation of liberty into their care planning processes
- They must not, except in an urgent situation, deprive a person of liberty unless a standard authorisation relating to the person’s residence in that hospital or care home has been given by the supervisory body, and remains in force
- It is up to the managing authority to request such authorisation and implement the outcomes
PROCEDURE

- Authorisation should be obtained from the supervisory body in advance of the deprivation of liberty, except in circumstances where it is considered to be urgent that the deprivation of liberty begins immediately. In such cases, authorisation must be obtained within 7 days of the start of the deprivation of liberty.
- A managing authority must ensure that any conditions attached to the authorisation are complied with.
- A managing authority should monitor whether the relevant person’s representative maintains regular contact with the person.
- Authorisation of deprivation of liberty should only be sought if it is genuinely necessary for a person to be deprived of liberty in their best interests in order to keep them safe. It is not necessary to apply for authorisations for all admissions to hospitals and care homes simply because the person concerned lacks capacity to decide whether to be admitted.

Key points for local authorities (supervisory body):

In implementing the deprivation of liberty safeguards, supervisory bodies should be aware of the following key points:

- They will receive applications from managing authorities for standard authorisations of deprivation of liberty.
- Supervisory bodies will need to ensure that sufficient assessors are available to meet the needs of those in their area and that they have the skills, qualifications and training to perform the function.
- Before an authorisation for deprivation of liberty may be given, the supervisory body must have obtained written assessments of the relevant person in order to ensure that they meet the required criteria (including that the deprivation of liberty is necessary to protect them from harm and will be in their best interests).
- Authorisation may not be given unless the assessors recommend it.
- In giving authorisation, the supervisory body must specify its duration, which may not exceed 12 months and may not be for longer than recommended by the best interests assessor. Deprivation of liberty should not continue for longer than is necessary.
- The supervisory body may attach conditions to the authorisation if it considers it appropriate to do so.
- The supervisory body must give notice in writing to specified people and notify specified people of its decision.
The supervisory body must appoint a relevant person’s representative to represent the interests of every person that they issue a standard authorisation for deprivation of liberty for

At any time when an authorisation is in force, the relevant person, the relevant person’s representative or any IMCA representing the individual has a right to require the authorisation to be reviewed by the supervisory body.

15.3 Key points for managing authorities and supervisory bodies:

In addition to the above, both managing authorities and supervisory bodies should be aware of the following key points:

An authorisation may last for a maximum period of 12 months

Anyone engaged in caring for the person, anyone named by them as a person to consult, and anyone with an interest in the person’s welfare must be consulted in decision-making

Prior to the expiry of the current period of authorisation, the managing authority may seek a fresh authorisation for up to another 12 months, provided it is established, on the basis of further assessment, that the relevant criteria continue to be met

The authorisation should be reviewed, and if appropriate revoked, before it expires if there has been a significant change in the person’s circumstances. To this end, the managing authority will be required to ensure that the continued deprivation of liberty of a person remains necessary and appropriate

A decision to deprive a person of liberty may be challenged by the relevant person, or by the relevant person’s representative, by means of an application to the Court of Protection, without requiring permission. However, managing authorities and supervisory bodies should always be prepared to try to resolve disputes locally and informally. No one should be forced to apply to the Court because of failure or unwillingness on the part of a managing authority or supervisory body to engage in constructive discussion

In a case where there is a question about whether or not a managing authority is authorised to deprive a person of their liberty, the deprivation will be lawful where it is necessary:

- for the purpose of giving the person life-sustaining treatment, or
- to prevent a serious deterioration in their condition while a decision as respects any relevant issue is sought from the court
The complete process of assessing and authorising deprivation of liberty should be clearly recorded, and regularly monitored and audited, as part of an organisation’s governance structure.

Management information should be recorded and retained, and used to measure the effectiveness of the deprivation of liberty processes. This information will also need to be shared with the inspection bodies.

1. Does the person lack the capacity to consent to remain in the registered care home or hospital in order to receive the care or treatment that is necessary to prevent harm to them?

   YES
   - An application may be required

   NO
   - An application cannot be made as the person has the capacity to agree to or to refuse the proposed treatment. The person should be supported to make their own decision, and the care plan amended accordingly. If the person appears to require mental health treatment to which they do not consent, and they meet the criteria for detention under the Mental Health Act 1983, then an application under the Act may be considered.

2. Is the person at risk of deprivation of liberty now or within the next 28 days?

   YES
   - An application may be required

   NO
   - An application is not required. This question should be reconsidered when changes are made to the person’s care.

3. Can the person receive the planned care or treatment via a less restrictive but still effective alternative than depriving them of their liberty?

   NO
   - An application may be required

   YES
   - An application cannot be made. The care plan must be speedily reviewed and where necessary alternative arrangements made to ensure an unauthorised deprivation of liberty does not commence or continue and that the care or treatment is provided via a less restrictive alternative, which may include a move to another facility.

4. Is the person 18 years of age now (or within the next 28 days)?

   YES
   - An application may be required

   NO
   - An application cannot be made. You may need to consider the use of the Children Act 1989, or if the person appears to require mental health treatment and meets the criteria for detention under the Mental Health Act 1983, then an application under the Act may be considered.

GO TO PART 2
5. Is the person subject to any of the powers of the Mental Health Act 1983 in a way that would mean they are ineligible for a deprivation of liberty under the Mental Capacity Act 2005?

- NO
  - An application may be required

- YES
  - An application cannot be made. The relevant Mental Health Act 1983 powers should be used.

6. Is the proposed deprivation of liberty at least in part order to provide treatment and has the person made a valid and applicable advance decision to refuse that treatment?

- NO
  - An application cannot be made. The care plan will need to be speedily reviewed and where necessary alternative arrangements made to ensure that an unauthorised deprivation of liberty does not commence or continue. If the person appears to meet the criteria for detention under the Mental Health Act 1983, an application under that Act could be initiated.

- YES
  - An application may be required

7. Is the proposed deprivation of liberty at least in part for the purpose of mental health treatment in hospital and does the person object to going to (or staying in) hospital or the proposed treatment? Does the person meet the criteria to be detained under section 2 or 3 of the Mental Health Act 1983 instead?

- NO (to either question)
  - An application may be required

- YES (to both question)
  - An application cannot be made (unless an attorney or deputy has consented on the person’s behalf to things to which the person objects)

8. Has the person’s attorney or deputy, who has the authority to do so, indicated that they will object to the person entering (or staying) in the hospital or care home or that they refuse any or all of the proposed treatment or care on their behalf?

- NO
  - An application is required

- YES
  - An application cannot be made. The care plan will need to be speedily reviewed and where necessary alternative arrangements made to ensure that an unauthorised deprivation of liberty does not commence or continue. If the person appears to meet the criteria for detention under the Mental Health Act 1983, an application under that Act should be initiated.

9. Is it necessary in the person’s best interests for deprivation to begin immediately?

- YES
  - The managing authority should grant an urgent authorisation itself and apply to the supervisory body for a standard authorisation.

- NO
  - The managing authority needs to apply to the supervisory body for a standard authorisation.
